

I understand that the FCC has introduced a new broadcast service known as Low Power FM (LPFM). I am concerned with the proposed expansion of this type of service as it would have an adverse affect on the station I currently listen to, K-LOVE, which is a national station who utilizes FM translator services.

K-LOVE is a station option in my local area and they meet a need for Christian Music, with no commercials. They also provide public service announcements on events in my area, most of which I have an interest in. I enjoy this station and the fact that it is free of commercials. The quality of the programming is outstanding.

While there are other options in the area to listen to Christian music, none are of the superior quality as K-LOVE and most of them also contain commercials which I personally find annoying.

I encourage you to reconsider you proposals on the expansion of LPFM as I believe it would be a huge disservice to my local area and also millions of K-LOVE listeners across the nation. One of K-LOVE's themes is "Positive & Encouraging." This is a unique theme among radio stations as many of them are anything but that. K-LOVE does an excellent job of living up to that theme and they provide me with encouragement on a daily basis, encouragement that I like having and want to continue to have.

Thank you for your consideration in this area.
